Information and Communication Technologies (ICT)

Our ICT updates are on track to ensure that all our digital platforms comply with Web Content Accessibility Guidelines (WCAG) 2.0 AA standards. This includes a comprehensive overhaul of our website and internal systems to enhance usability for individuals with disabilities. The scheduled date for the website update is June 1st, 2026.

Communication, Other Than ICT

We have improved our non-digital communication methods to ensure that all passengers receive clear and accessible information. This includes training our staff to use simple language and to provide information slowly and clearly, both in person and through our pre-recorded announcements available in both official languages.

Procurement of Goods, Services, and Facilities

Nolinor Aviation has integrated accessibility criteria into our procurement processes. This ensures that all new goods, services, and facilities are evaluated for their ability to meet the needs of individuals with disabilities, thereby reducing barriers and enhancing accessibility.

Design and Delivery of Programs and Services

All passenger service agents and flight attendants receive ongoing training focused on accessible transportation. This ensures that all passengers, including those with disabilities, can access and benefit from our services. We are also reviewing our service procedures to enhance personalized assistance.

Transportation

We have made significant improvements in the accessibility of our transportation services, especially at Mirabel Airport, where we've upgraded facilities and equipment. For other locations, we coordinate with service providers to ensure that accessibility standards are met.

Built Environment

At our primary hub and other facilities, we've reconfigured layouts to ensure accessibility, including more accessible waiting rooms and service counters. Future renovations and new constructions will continue to meet stringent accessibility standards.

Provisions of CTA Accessibility-Related Regulations

Nolinor Aviation strictly adheres to the ATPDR, ensuring that all operational practices and staff training align with these regulatory requirements. We are committed to maintaining the highest standards of accessibility in all aspects of air transportation.

Feedback Information

We encourage feedback through multiple channels, including in-person, email, phone, and mail. All feedback is used to continuously improve our services and address any issues related to accessibility.

Consultations

In January 2024, we conducted a comprehensive survey involving our 285 employees, including those with disabilities, to gather insights on our accessibility services. The feedback has been instrumental in shaping our current initiatives and future plans.

This progress report reflects our ongoing commitment to accessibility and our dedication to ensuring a seamless and inclusive experience for all our customers. We remain committed to continuous improvement and welcome any suggestions from our passengers and employees.
